

News: Palladium Show For Daniel Sloss

By Bruce Dessau on 11/1/2019

Daniel Sloss is to perform his acclaimed show X at the London Palladium. Tickets for the new show on Friday, May 10 go on sale Friday 18th January at the link below.

This comes as a result of the phenomenal demand for tickets across the UK which has seen the 28 year old sell out all of his tour shows to date, including the original run at London's Soho Theatre, two additional shows at the Leicester Square Theatre and another two shows at the 02 Forum Kentish Town.

Fast becoming one of comedy's big names Netflix released the 28-year-old's two full-length comedy specials Daniel Sloss: Live Shows:

DARK and Jigsaw on 11 September 2018 (his birthday) streaming worldwide to 190 countries in 26 languages.

Daniel's smash-hit live tour is spanning more than 200 shows across 30 countries around the globe. He has performed on US TV's Conan a record eight times, to date has over 30 million views of his online stand-up clips, has sold out at eleven consecutive Edinburgh Festival Fringes (the world's biggest arts festival where he has been one of the biggest comedy ticket sellers for the past nine years), and played nine solo sold out seasons in London's West End as well as three seasons off-Broadway in New York with the fourth extended season currently on sale at the prestigious Soho Playhouse. His Los Angeles show at Largo sold out in just a day and a second show sold out as well.

X is his tenth solo show and comes with a warning that it deals with some challenging contemporary adult themes.

Daniel Sloss has featured on ITV1's 'Sunday Night at the Palladium', Comedy Central's 'Roast Battles' and 'Drunk History'. He also made an eponymous broadcast BBC sitcom pilot, released his first DVD and gave a 'Tedx' Talk which has had close to a million views. He also wrote, crowd-funded, directed and starred in six-part online series 'M.U.F.F', all before he was 23.

DARK, created in 2015 when he was just 24, deals with the death of his sister. The sequel Jigsaw (previously named SO?) has been nicknamed "the break-up show" (currently resulting in over 15,000 reported relationship breakups, 60 cancelled engagements and 70 divorces – people are remarkably happy about it, even celebrating by sending Daniel messages about it, with one couple photographed signing decree nisi papers together).
